OUR HISTORY

When the Germans flocked to Texas and its Hill Country in the mid-1800s, their main imports were hard work, fun, music, good cooking, and beer. "Papa Fritz" Schilo was no exception. Schilo's saloon was started in Beeville, Texas, in the early 1900s, and in 1914, he moved his family and business to San Antonio on Commerce Street. Mrs. Schilo began serving some of her favorite recipes in 1917; some are still in use today. When prohibition hit America in 1920, her timing was perfect, as beer could no longer be served. The food saw them through, along with a supercharged root beer, still served today, allowing the Germans to lift a mug to "prost" their tradition.

That same year, they opened at the corner of South Alamo and Worth Street. In 1927, Schilo's moved again to Commerce Street, close to its present location. The Christmas season-German style was the best time of the year with their elaborate window decorations. With typical German determination, Schilo's survived the floods of 1921 and 1929 and the Depression. Substantial hot lunches became the specialty, enhanced by Mama Schilo's Split Pea Soup.

After Papa Fritz passed away in 1935, the reins were handed over to his son Edgar. In 1942, Schilo's moved to its present location, originally a currency exchange bank, and was operated by the third generation of the Schilo family. The original bank vault is now a custom walk-in cooler. After three generations, the Schilo family sold the business to neighboring business owners, the Lyons family in 1980. The Lyons family have their own piece of history to share... Five generations back, their predecessor Al Beyer, founded a little Tex-Mex riverside cafe known as Casa Rio. In true multi-cultural fashion that is unique to the region, this German family now continues to be the custodians to both iconic establishments working to preserve the rich heritage our city has to offer.

A lot has changed since 1917, times-faces-places, but by God's grace, Schilo's remains a place where good times and good food can always be found.
